

COMMANDING GENERAL'S UNIT, PERSONAL AND FAMILY READINESS POLICY STATEMENT

1st Marine Logistics Group's most valuable resource is our people; a dedicated and motivated team of Marines, Sailors, and Civilians. To execute our mission and respond when we are needed, we must be able to answer the call to duty on a moment's notice, whether that call pertains to the everyday operations of our station or in support of events such as contingencies or natural disaster and humanitarian relief efforts. Personal and family readiness is a fundamental aspect of our ability to respond to that call.

Every Marine, Sailor, and Civilian on our staff is ultimately responsible for his or her own personal and family readiness. The resources, referrals, and support networks of the Unit, Personal and Family Readiness Program (UPFRP) are designed to educate, assist, and empower our Marines, Sailors, and their families, thereby ensuring resiliency for managing life and thriving in a military lifestyle. The UPFRP is neither designed nor intended to replace small unit leadership, but rather it serves as a support function to assist Marine leaders at all levels in their pursuit of readiness.

The tenets of the UPFRP are to:

- Provide an official communication channel between the command, our Marines, Sailors, Civilians, and families.
- Provide information resource and referral services to meet the individual needs of Marines, Sailors, Civilians, and families.
- Provide readiness and deployment support to our individual augments.
- Provide volunteer management for the UPFRP. Our volunteers are essential in supporting family outreach events and other support network activities and programs.

The 1st Marine Logistics Group Family Readiness Command Team is dedicated to ensuring our Marines, Sailors, Civilians, and families are mission ready. As Commanding General, it is my responsibility to ensure the success of the UPFRP. Supporting me in that endeavor is our Deployment Readiness Coordinator, Mrs. Andrea Tatayon, who may be reached at (760) 468-8337 or via email at andrea.tatayon@usmc.mil.

P. N. FRIETZE

Brigadier General, U.S. Marine Corps
Commanding General, 1st Marine Logistics Group